

Ross Brown / VP of Commercial Sales

I was born and raised outside of Chicago, Illinois. I lived in many of Chicago's neighborhoods before my family and I moved to San Diego in 2015.

My interest in design and construction started early and led to my decision to attend the School of Architecture at Tulane University.

After returning to Chicago, I began my career in construction and then in kitchen and bath design. Two of my projects were featured on "New Spaces" which aired on HGTV.

My wife Karen, and I are blessed with two amazing children, Marlon and Maya. We enjoy hiking, tennis and cooking together.

My approach to commercial flooring starts with my passion as a designer. I love the process of working on a project from concept to completion. A wide variation of commercial projects brings new challenges every day. By using a solution based approach, I help my clients overcome these challenges. Collaboration is the key to success. Before any specific products are discussed, a thorough assessment of the project goal is conducted. Products are then selected based on design, performance and budget. I am dedicated to exceeding your expectations by utilizing my experience as a designer and project manager to serve as a trusted resource to my clients.

I am proud to a part of the team of professionals at Metro Flooring. I look forward to working with you.
